

THE SIEGE
O F
TROY,

A Dramatick Performance,

Presented in

Mrs. M Y N N S's Great Booth, in the Queens-Arms Yard near the Marshalsea Gate in Southwark, during the Time of the FAIR.

C O N T A I N I N G

A Description of all the Scenes, Machines, and Movements, with the whole Decoration of the P L A Y, and Particulars of the Entertainment.

LONDON: Printed in the Year MDCCXV.

Taylor fund

29-20
76

TO THE READER.

Printed Publication of an Entertainment performed in a publick Fair, which, how gay or richly soever set off, will hardly reach to a higher Title than the customary Name of a DROLL, may seem somewhat new. But as the present Undertaking, the Work of near ten Months preparation, is so extraordinary a Performance, that without Boast or Vanity we may modestly say, In the whole several Seenes, Movements and Machines, it is no ways Inferior even to any Opera yet seen in any of the Royal Theatres; as Thousands of Living Witnesses, that saw it at its first performance, Eight Years since in Bartholomew Fair, will acknowledge, nor is the least part of its Original Grandeur now diminisht in the present Fair; we are therefore under some sort of Necessity to make this Publication, thereby to give even the meanest of our Audience a full Light into all the Object they will there meet in this Expensive Entertainment; the Proprietors of which have adventur'd to make, under some small Hopes, That as they yearly see some of their happier Brethren Under-takers in the FAIR, more cheaply obtain even the Engrost Smiles of the Gentry and Quality at so much an easier Price, so on the other side their own more costly Projection (though less Favourites) might possibly attain to that good Fortune, at least to attract a little share of the good Graces of the more Honourable part of the Audience; and perhaps be able to purchase some of those Smiles, which elsewhere have been thus long the profuser Donation of particular Affection and Favour.

Menclaus

ACTORS NAMES.

Menelaus. King of Greece, and Husband to Queen Helen, engaged in a Ten Years War in the Siege of Troy, in Revenge for the Loss of his Queen; stolen from him by Paris, Son of King Priam, and living within the Walls of Troy in publick Adultery with him.

Ulysses. King of Thrace, one of the Grecian Princes, Engaged in the Quarrel of King Menelaus, the Politick Manager of the Wooden Horse; built by the Greeks, and left behind them in their feign'd Retreat from before the Walls of Troy.

Paris. A Trojan Prince, living in the Adulterous Embraces of Queen Helen.

Sinon. A Cunning Grecian, so Zealous for the Service of his King, that he Cut off his Lips, and Ears, and Nose, dismembering his own Face, being left bound in Irons, under the Belly of the Wooden Horse, to be thereby the better enabled, from the sight of such barbarous Sufferings, to rende himself the unsuspected object of their Pity to the Trejan Spectators; from thence by his artful Tears, and moving Eloquence, to insinuate himself into their easy belief, as to persuade them to draw the Horse within the City of Troy.

W O M E N.

Helen. King Menelaus's Wife, and Mistress to Paris.

Cassandra. A Virgin Daughter of King Priam, an Exalted Character of Piety and Virtue, inspired by the Gods with the true Spirit of Prophecy, yet never believed; a Vehement Prosector of Paris and Helen, for their Lewd and Wicked Lives, and Foretelling the Destruction of Troy, a Vengean e hanging over their Heads, for their impious and harden'd Adulter'.

Venus. The Goddess of Love, a Patroness to Paris and Helen.

A numerou Train of Trojan Mob, Spectators of the Wooden Horse, and Actors through the Play.

Three Persons dress'd in Gold for Statues in Diana's Temple.

Nine Priests and Priestesses of Diana.

Ten Persons richly dress'd, and Retinue of Paris and Helen.

Twenty-two Officers, Guards and Trumpets, the Attendants of King Menelaus. In the whole Fifty-three Persons dress'd, besides the Actors and Dancers in the Play.

THE

THE SIEGE of TROY.

A C T . I.

The Curtain is drawn up, and discovers King Menelaus, Ulysses, Attendants and Guards.

King.

 Ever were Wrongs like mine! an impious Wife;
The pleasure once, now Torment of my Life.
Why in his Crimes do's still th' Adulterer reign?
And why for ten long Years have I in vain
'Gainst Troy's proud Walls my feeble Vengeance pusht,

Ulys. Droop not, great Sir, for ten Years Labour lost,
When a few Days now seal the Fate of Troy.
Look forwards, Sir, to that prodigious Engine
Of Troy's Destruction, that tall Wooden Horse
We have prepar'd, in whose dark Womb of Fate,
Five hundred generous Volunteers all wait,
All at one stroke to give the fatal Blow.
Fear not Success.

King. No; wise Ulysses, no.

When thy great Hand's the Royal Engineer,
'Tis by such Pilots I to Glory steer.

Ulys. Consider, Sir, what managing Hand I've found
To move this vast Machine; the Honest Sinon:
A Man so hearty in your Royal Cause,
That he has dismember'd even his very Face,
Cut off his Lips and Nose, and torn his Eyes out,
To make himself the Object of their Pity.

The Siege of T R O Y.

That by his moving Looks and artful Tears
He may so lull the Credulous Trojans Ears
To draw that fatal Horse within their Walls.

King. Now Fate, curst Troy, for thy Destruction calls.
Revenge, Oh! dear Revenge, guide my keen Sword
To the Adultrous Helen's canker'd Heart,
And Oh! 'twill give me more Divine Delight,
Than all the Raptures of her Bridal Night.

Vtys. Our Army thus retired, drawn off from Troy,
Think what Securi y do their hulst Fears enjoy.

K. Thus far our Plot succeeds; this false Retreat we make,
Only to come with greater Vengeance back. (Exeunt.)

S C E N E II.

Enter Bristle, a Cobler, and his Wife.

B. flte. I tell you once for all, you shall not go.

Wife. Not go to see the great Horse the Grecians have left behind 'em.

Br. To be Hors'd your self, ye Jade: What, because the Grecians have left a Wooden Horse behind 'em, and are all march'd off like Asses themselves, you must be galloping among the Mob, must ye, to see Sights with a Pox to you:
Get ye home to your Wheel and Spin, or I'll so mawl ye.

Wife. Spin! Ay, 'twas a cursed hard Thread I spun--when I Marry'd such a Cobling Rogue; a Rogue that Back-beats me, and Belly-starves me too, a frib'ling, sneaking, fumbling Rogue, that has got me but one Child in 20 Years, and gives me but three Meals a Day to keep Life and Soul together.

Br. Here's an impudent Sows-baby.

W. Well, I am resolv'd I will go abroad, and see this sight, though the Devil stay at home and piss out the Fire.

Br. Will you so! Then I'm resolved I'll give your Whores Hides such a lick of Styrup Leather, till I make your own Devilship piss it out.

W. Help, help, Murder.

Within. Huzzah, huzzah.

Enter Mob.

1st Mob. speaking } The Horse, the Horse, the Horse.

2d Mob. } all toge- } The Greeks, the Greeks, the Greeks.

3d Mob. ther, } All run, run, run.

Br.

The Siege of T R O Y.

7

Br. Hold, hold, hold Neighbours. Let one Man speak at once.

All. Ay, ay, let our Neighbour Bristle speak first.

Br. Then mark me, good Folks, we are all going to see this great Horse.

All. Ay, ay, the Horse, the Horse.

Br. Look ye then Neighbours, let us then march Soberly and Decently in roaring geod Order, as those Civil Gentlemen, call'd the Mob, should do; and I'll be Captain Tom your Leader.

1st Mob. You our Leader! Why who are you?

Br. Who am I Jack Sawse? Why, I am the second Man in the Nation, I am the King's Head Cobler.

All. A Cobler!

All. All, who but a Cobler; I'de have you to know that I am the Man that put such a stout pair of Soles upon the King's last Neatleather Shoes, that he has kickt the whole Grecian Army quite out of the Kingdom, and his Majesty and I are two great Savers of the Nation.

All. Ay, ay, a Captain, a Captain a Captain.

Br. Then follow your Leader. But for yon, Jifhirt, get ye home ye Jade, or I'll so strap you---- (Exeunt all but Wife) 3d Mob. A barbarous hard hearted Man. and 3d Mob.

W. Barbarous indeed, if ye knew all.

3d Mob. And to so pretty a Creature.

W. Oh Lord, Sir, pretty!

3d Mob. So pretty that I must make bold. (Kisses her.)

W. Now Blessings on the Honey sweet Eyes of you, dear Sir. Oh this unnatural Brute of a Husband, has he no Conscience in him, then to keep me lockt up at home, when there are such kind Gentlemen, and such sweet Comforts abroad in the World. (Exeunt.)

The Scene opens and discovers Paris and Helen, fronting the Audience, riding in a Triumphant Chariot, drawn by two White Elephants, mounted by two Pages in embroider'd Liveries. The side Wings are ten Elephants more, bearing on their Backs open Castles, umbraged with Canopies of Gold; the ten Castles fill'd with ten Persons richly dress'd, the Revenue of Paris; and on the Elephants Necks ride ten more Pages in like rich Dress. Beyond and over the Chariot, is seen a Vision of the City of Troy, on the Walls of which, stand several Trumpeters seen behind and over the Head of Paris, who sound at the opening of the Scene.

Paris

The Siege of T R O Y.

Paris. Whilst the Fair Helen in these Arms I twine,
These Sweets, and all this beauteous Treasure mine ;
Ten smiling Years Crown'd with my vast Delight,
Have been but one continued Nuptial Night.

Helen. Oh Paris, for thy Love, what have I done !
What Storms have I pull'd down ? What Dangers run ?
Asia and Europe wak'd with Wars Alarms,
Set Kingdoms in a Blaze, and the whole World in Arms.

Par. But now those Wars are done, and Troy's Invincible :
Yes, my Fair Life, the Coward Greeks are fled :
And leave me Lord of Thee.

And now when the tir'd World's long Discords cease,
We'll tune our Trumps of War, to Songs of Peace.
Where Hector drag'd in Blood, I'll drive around
The Walls of Troy with Love, and Lawrels Crown'd.

Enter Cassandra.

Cass. Oh Paris, Paris, all this pageant Pride,
And that triumphant Sorceress by thy side !
What Banners can hardfronted Sin display,
When vile Adultery adorn'd so gay,

Dares front the Light, and shame the Blushing Day ?

Hel. Oh my dear Paris, is that Schreicowl here ?
Will that eternal Torturer never leave us ?

Cass. No, black Adulteress, close, as thy dark Fate, I fol-
And loud as thy own crying Guilt, I come (low thee,
To echo thine, and Troy's approaching Doom.

Yet, headlong Paris, stop thy mad Career,
And to the Voice of Fate unlock thy Ear.
Hear Heav'n and me. Not three short Suns shall rise,
E're burning Troy one heap of Ruine lies.

Par. Vain Preaching Fool ! More Dreams, more Visions
More Tales of Stars and Fate, my Ears to fill : (still,
Will empty Noise and Nonsense never cease,
And thy wild Frenzy never give me Peace ?

Cass. Peace Paris, no ; with all thy Load of Sin,
Soft Peace and Thou, must never meet agen.
War everlasting War, the Batt'ling World,
And angry Gods with all the Bolts of Fate,
Blood, Fire and Sword for thy Destruction wait.

The Siege of T R O Y.

In Troy's one blazing Heap, one funeral Urn,
Shalt Thou and thy Adultrous Minion bnrn,

Par. No more, bold Insolent, I'll hear no more,
Do not provoke my Vengeance thus to dare
With thy vile Breath profane this Heavenly Fair;
For if thou dost, by all the Pow'rs I swear,
I'll drive my Chariot o'er thy trampled Head,
Beneath my rowling Wheels, I'll crush thee Dead.

Cass. Yes, thou shalt hear no more, Lascivious Boy,
Taint to thy Blood, from Thee the Fate of Troy,
Thy blushing Sister takes her weeping Eyes,
Not from thy Threats, but from thy Shame she flies. (Exit.)

Par. Hark, what Celestial Musick's this I hear!

Venus descends in a Chariot drawn by two Swans.
See, see Love's Goddess from her Heav'nly Sphere, right Venus dreit in her divinest Ray, descends to grace the Triumphs of this Day.

Ven. Yes, Paris, Lord of the Fair Helens Charms, give that darling Beauty to thy Arms,
and will preserve her there.

Secure for ever thy rich Prize enjoy;
No envious Cloud shall your fair Peace destroy,
I shine the Guardian Deity of Troy.

Par. Oh I am lost in Raptures, this high Grace!
But where's my Vassals? Where's my waiting Train?
Quick, quick ye Slaves, for Goodness so Divine,
In all your Ayres, your Songs of Triumph joyn.

Ten Rich Figures in the Castles of the Elephants, address themselves to the Goddes, with this following piece of Musick in Chorus.

S O N G.

Hail Beauteous Goddess all Divine,
Our uprais'd Eyes and Hearts all thine,
To Love to pray,
To Love we kneel,
Thy Pow'r we own,
Thy Darts we feel,
To thy bright sway, thy Sovereign Throne,
Nor suppliant Mortals bend alone
To the Blind God, thy Boy and Thee.
Even Jove, Almighty Jove, here bows a Kneec. ACT.

A C T II.

The Scene opens, and in a Wood without the Walls of Troy, appears the Trojan Horse, being a Figure of that Magnitude, that 'tis 17 Foot high to the top of his Back. The whole Figure magnificently adorn'd with all the Trapping, Furniture of a War Horse, set off with rich Gildings, Plumes of Feathers, and all other suitable Decorations.

Under his Feet lies Simon, with a mangled Face all bloody, his Nose cut off, his Eyes out, &c bound in Irons.

Enter Mob.

Capt. Br. Ay, ay, here 'tis. Here's the Wonder of Greece, and the Honour of Troy. All our own, Boys, Huzzah.

1 Mob. Well, I never saw such a sight in all my Born Days.

2 Mob. Ay, Neighbour, 'tis a wonderful Beast, that's certain.

Capt. Br. Beast! Udzooks, have a care what you say! Call such a Noble Creature Beast! Why 'tis enough to make him up with his Wooden Leg and kick your Guts out.

2 Mob. I vow and swear, Captain, 'twas before I was aware; but I beg the Horse's Princely Pardon, and I am his Highnesses most humble Servant.

Enter Mrs. Bristle.

2 Mob. And how dost thou like this Noble Palfrey?

Wife. Oh wondrous! 'Tis a delicate fine Beauishap'd Creature. Ah, that had a Coach and six such Horses, what a topping Countess shou'd I make.

Capt. And are you got hither, with a Vengeance to you?

Wife. Ay, my Dear, and all the reason in the World. Now this Noble Troop of Trojans have made you their Captain, I cou'd do no less, my Dear, for thy Honour, then bring my sweet Face hither, to show 'em the Captain's Lady.

[Sinon groans.]

Capt. Who's that groans?

[Sinon groans again.]

1 Mob. Look, look there, what's he all gash'd with Blood and Wounds, that lies in Chains beneath the Horses Feet?

All. Let's unbind him, unbind him. (They unbind him.)

The Siege of T R O Y.

11

Enter Ulysses disguised.

Ulyss. Now 'tis my Hour to mix amongst the Crowd.
This Shape secures me.

2 Mob. What are you, Friend?

(To Sinon.)

Sinon. A Man, Sir, and a grateful one.

Whilst on my Knees I thank the generous Hands
That have unloos'd my Chains.

Mob. Who bound thee?

Sinon. Villains.

Mob. What Villains?

Sinon. Cowardly ones. The Coward Greeks,
They who durst face no more the Walls of Troy;
But are all run —

Mob. Run, whither?

Sinon. To the Devil, I hope.

Durst bind an Innocent Witch, load me with Irons,
And gash me thus with all these hideous Wounds,
The natural Marks of Cowardise, Barbarity.

Wife. Ah Neighour, what a sweet Face is there spoil'd?

Mob. Ay, poor Man; they were a pack of wicked
Rogues that did all this.

Wife. Ay, and wicked Whores too, Neighbour, if the Truth were known.

Sinon. Oh lend your pitying Ear to a poor bleeding Martyr.
For one poor harmless Word, one slight Offence,
The Tyrant King of Greece, has given me all
These hideous Bran's, for which I owe him Death.
Curses and Thunder blast him.

Wife. Ay, Friend, You do well to say your Prayers backwards for him. And was it King Menelau that used you thus unmercifully?

Sinon. The Tyrant Menelau.

Wife. Ay, 'tis like him. My old Rogue is just such another.

Capt. Hark you, Neighbours. Look ye, this Fellow well manag'd, may give us full light and discovery; why the Greeks are run, and when they run, and how they run, and whither they run.

2 Mob. A very good thought.

3 Mob. Ay, Noble Capt. But who dares trust him? he's a Greek himself.

Ulyss.

Ulyss. Not trust him, Gentlemen ! Who dares not tru him ? What tho' a Grecian Born, with that torn Face, an all those gaping Wounds, he's too much loaded with Wrongs and Miseries to serve such Masters now.

Capt. Adad he's i'th' right.

2 Mob. A True Trojan I warrant him. He talks like a Oracle.

Wife. Ay, a very pretty Fellow, only his Beard's a little thin too long.

Capt. Then, look ye; we'll ask him two or three wise
Questions. And then carry him to King Priam to be Exa-min'd. Pray Friend, why did the Grecians leave this Horse Yet behind 'em ?

Sinon. The Gods that warn'd 'em from the Siege of Troy,
Commanded 'em to leave this Monument,
A Pledge of Peace not to return in Arms.

2 Mob. This Monument we'll have drawn into the City.
All. Ay, ay, into the City, into the City.

Capt. Hold, hold a little ; How will you get it there ?
The Gates are all too low.

3 Mob. Ay, Pox o' the Devil, all all too low.

1 Mob. All undone, all ruin'd.

2 Mob. The whole Show spoil'd, we shall never get it in.
All. Oh never, never, never !

Ulyss. What all amort, my honest Friends and Countrymen,
Not lead this Trophy of the Trojan Glory
Into fair Troy's proud City ; caule the Gates
Are only Arch'd too low ! Let not that stop ye,
Pull down the Walls, and give it Entrance there.

All. Pull down the Walls.

Ulyss. Ay, Gentlemen, make a wide Breach, if possible
Large as your own great Souls ; the Walls pull down,
And have it drawn in Triumph thro' the Town.

1 Mob. Do ye hear that, Noble Captain ?

Capt. Ay, Pox on't, I do hear it. What a Dunce of a Dog am I that I could not think of this ?

2 Mob. And what shall we do now, Captain ?

Capt. Do ! why pull down the Walls, pull down the Walls.

All. Ay, pull down the Walls, Huzzah.

(Exeunt.)

The Siege of T R O Y.

13

The Scene shuts.

Vyss. Now Vengeance moves secure. Now impious Paris,
Thy Mother's fatal Dream when thou wert Born
That from her Womb she had a Firebrand torn,
Should set all Troy in Flames, shall be fulfill'd,
All seal'd with Fate — — Troy shall in Flames expire
a Little This Arm, and thy hot Lust shall light the Fire. (Exit.)

Enter Cassandra alone.

Cass. Why was I born Troy's Virgin Oracle?
The Exa- Th' impending Fate of Empire to foretel,
Horse yet never be believ'd — Yet at the last
I've beg'd the Gods a Miracle to perform.
No more then Paris, his deaf Ears I'll storm,
His Nobler Senses now I will surprize,
And preach bright Reason to his blinded Eyes. (Exit.)

The Scene opens and discovers the Temple of Diana, being a magnificent Structure richly adorn'd, the Capitals, Urns, Crescents, Festoons, and other carv'd Work, all gilt, consisting of ten pieces of Painting, in each of which, in a large Nych in each Front of these Paintings, are seen ten Statues of the Heathen Gods, viz. Jupiter, Juno, Pallas, Apollo, Neptune, Thetis, Mars, Venus, Ceres and Mercury, each Figure near five Foot high, and all gilt. In the back of the Stage, in the Centre of the Temple, is a rich Altar-piece, bearing 3 Nyches in the Walls, in the middle of which on a Pedestal 18 Inches high, stands a young Woman drest in Cloth of Gold, representing the Statue of Diana, holding a Hunting Spear in her Hand; and on two other Pedestals of the same height on each Hand of her, stand two more young Women, in the like Golden Habit, representing two of her Nymphs, each with a Bow and a Quiver.

over this Altar piece, and beyond the View of the Temple, are seen three beautiful Circles of Clouds, and on the Back Scene beyond them in a serene Haven, is seen Diana driving in a Chariot drawn by two Hinds.

Enter a Procession of Priests and Priestesses in Vestments, adorn'd with Silver Crescents.

Vocal Musick.

Bright Cynthia, Sovereign Queen of Light,
With all thy Vassal Stars so bright,
Where thy celestial Glories shine,
To Thee, to Thee.
We bend a Knee,
Our Song of Triumph thine.

Enter Paris and Helen. Their Trains born up by 12 Pages.

Par. Since Troy's Deliverance at Diana's Shrine,
To pay your Rites Divine,
Has brought you here.

This sacred Song with that Attraction draws,
That take our Knees join'd in this hallow'd Cause.

1. P r e s t. If our resounding Song of Triumph calls
Such Princely Heads to grace our Sacred Walls.
Raise, raise your Airs, if possible, yet higher;
When such Illustrious Glory joins the Choir.

Procession begins again.

Bright Cynthia to our solemn Vows
Thy Gracious Ear incline ;
Behold no less than Princely Brothers
Our solemn Offerings joyn.
Our Foes are run,
Our Fears are done ;
The Greeks are fled, and Troy's our own.

Enter Cassandra.

Helen. Ha ! do I see that persecuting Face !
Brings she new Loads of Scandal; new Disgrace
To throw on my fair Fame !

Par. No Danger fear.

These Sacred Walls will bear no Insult here.

Cass. Oh Paris, what mistaken Piety
Has brought thee here ! Canst thou who bend'st a Knee
To impious Love, t' unchaste and loath desire ?
Bow to Diana, join her Virgin Choire.

Par. What brings thee here ! Thou gavest thy word before
That I shou'd hear that croaking Voice no more.

Cass. And I'll perform my word. I come not now
To ceurt thy Ears,
But to convert thy Eyes.

The Gods have given me Pow'r to act a Miracle.
Seest thou those Glittering Statues of the Deities,
In all their shining Robes of Gold array'd ?

Par. Yes, all too bright for thy weak blast to shade.

Cass. Those radiant Forms, if possible to fable,
Dark as thy Crimes, I'll at one Breath transform,
And hang you smiling Skies, with all the Flames of Hell.

Here Cassandra moves her Wand, and in the twinkling of an Eye, the Ten Golden Statues, in the Painting, are all turn'd to black, and the three Figures on the Pedestals are likew^{se} stript of their Cloth of Gold, and all dress'd in Black : and the whole Vistoe of the Heavens is changed to a flaming Hell.

Cass. Now Paris, since thou hast lent so deaf an Ear
To all my Oracles of Truth, see there,
Will you believe your Eyes ?

Par. My Eyes.

Cass. Yes, Infidel.

Will all those dreadful sights convince you ?

Par. Sights —— What Sights ?

Cass. That hideous, that amazing Scene.

Par. Cassandra, What does this distraction mean ?

Cass. The very Gods, their Heads in Sable shrow'd,
And you bright Skies in one Infernal Cloud ;
Wrapt round with Horror, mourn the Face of Troy.

Par. What Clouds, what Sable ?

Cass. Look, look, there blind Boy.

Par. Sister, Mad, Foolish, Wretched, thoughtless thing,

To idle Miracles, make no more Pretence.
 I prithee rave no more; learn to talk Sense.
 But kneel, Oh kneel, and beg the pitying Gods
 To pardon thee this impious Profanation;
 Enough to make their very Images
 Whose shining Beams our dazled Eyes behold,
 If possible blush through their burnisht Gold
 To hear thee talk thus wildly.

Cass. Then thou seest not,
 Yon dismal Transformation?

Par. Transformation!

I see thee all Transform'd. Thou that wert born
 A Princess, Heir to all that shou'd adorn
 The Courts of Kings, with Royal Reason Crown'd.
 But Oh! thy whole fair Senses lost and Drown'd,
 Thou'rt in thy mad Fantastick Frenzy hurld,
 A Roving Lunatick round the wander'd World.

Cass. Oh what Confusion strikes my startled Ear!
 And do you reverend Men see nothing there.
 No Change in that high Roof.

Priest. A Change in Thee
 We see with pity. Thy lost Wits we see.

Cass. Now I am lost; The louring Destinies
 Are only visible to these poor Eyes.

And walk in Clouds to all the world beside.

Now mourn Cassandra, thy lost Country mourn,
 In Vain my helpless Hand her Fate wou'd turn.

Oh Paris, thou must bleed, and Troy must burn. (Exeunt.)

Hcl. Now my dear Love I am for ever thine.

Par. Yes, my fair Life, whilst yon bright Beams divine,
 And all those Golden Gods our Guardians shine. (Exeunt.)

A C T III.

The Scene opens and discovers the Town of Troy, consisting of ten Pieces of Uniform Painting, representing a Street of Magnificent Buildings, terminating with a double Wall of the City, and over the wall is seen an upper Town. In the Center, of this stands the Horse, who Ladders slip out, and immediately near forty Soldiers with their Officers, issue out of the Body of the Horse, all with their drawn Swords.

1st Off. NOW the great Work draws on. The Trojan Throats

Will now a cheap and easie price be found,
In their dead Sleep, lie close, till the great Signal's given;
The King and all the Army wait without,
To second the great Blow we must begin,
Returning by the Nights protecting Shade,
Entering that Breach the Trojan Hands have made.

(The Scene shuts.)

Enter Mob drunk.

1 Mob. Well Captain, we have a tory rary Night on't.

Cap. Ay Neighbour, the Noble Prince Paris has made all the Conduits in the Town piss Claret, and give such Feasting and Toping, and Fidling and Roaring, till we are all Princes as great as himself.

All. Ay, ay, all Princes, all Princes.

Capr. Oh Neighbours here are rare Days come on. Now the Wars are done, and Peace and Plenty are pouring in upon us, we shall have no Trade but Eating and Drinking; we shall have six halpeyny Loaves for a Farthing, and every Pint-pot shall hold a Gollon.

2 Mob. But are you sure these Blessed Days are a coming.

Capr.

Capt. Sure! why I have Prince Paris's own word for't.
2 Mob. And we may take his word; for he's a gracious good Prince.

Capt. And we his Loyal and Obedient Subjects after his own pious Example, walk uprightly, and live soberly. and are all drunk for Joy.

Enter Wife.

Wife. Ay, there's my Beast, Capt. Tom, and Capt. Sorr too. Pox on him, now must I play the Hypocrite, and coaks him home to Bed. If I don't, I am sure I shall have but a foul Load of Garbidge of him to morrow Morning. Have I found thee my Deary? well, my Dear, thou hast made a merry Night on't. But come; Chicken, 'tis past Midnight, and prethee let's home to Bed.

Capt. What, go like a poor Dog to Bed with my own Wife! No, Hussey, I'de have you know, I'll keep a Whore like Prince Paris, a Whore, you Bitch.

Wife. A Whore! Ay, ay, thou shalt keep a Whore. Thou shalt keep me, my Dear, and so prithee go home to Bed.

2 Mob. Ay, noble Captain, take her good Counsel. 'Tis high sleeping Time, and so let's all home to Bed.

Capt. Say you so?

Then home let's be jogging,
 There take tother Noggin,
 Be Drunk both without and within Doors;
 A pack o' Mad Fellows,
 We'll burn, burn the Bellows,
 And throw the whole House out o'sh' Windows.

The Scene opens and discovers the Town without the Horſe,

Enter King Ulysses, Grecians, Guards and Attendants, all with drawn Swords in one Hand, and lighted Flambeaus in the other.

K. Now Vengeance thou'rt my own. Now impious Troy, Thy Fall draws on. Burn, Ravish, and Destroy; Heap Piles of Fiae through ev'ry Flaming Street.

Ulysses

The Siege of T R O Y.

19

Ulyss. And sheath your Swords in all the Throats you meet.

K. Spare neither Age nor Sex.

Ulyss. No Shrines nor nor Temples save,

Make all one Crimson, and one blazing Grave.

K. Pull both with Fire and Swoad that Vengeance down,
Till Troy shall ev'n at once both burn and drown.

Think how you build th' Adultrous Helen's Urn,
Hot as her Lust, her Funeral Pile shou'd burn.

During the Commands given by the King, the Soldiers run up and down the Streets seemingly setting the Town on Fire, whilst near forty Windows or Portholes in the several Painting all appear on Fire, the Flames catching from House to House, and all perform'd by Illuminativerations rnd Transparent Painting seen scatter'd thro' the Scenes, both in the Upper and Lower Town.

(Exeunt.

Here enter several Trojans in various and distracted postures the Flaming Streets, pursued by the Grecians, other Grecians running away with Young Women in their Arme, all with several Shrieks and Cries, &c.

Enter Paris.

Par. Oh these dread Flames. Jove pours his wrathful Fire, Against poor Troy, both Men and Fates conspire.
But Fire and Sword fall with an easy weight,
I've lost my Helen; there's my stroke of Fate.

Enter Cassandra.

Cass. Now Unbeliever, see those blczing Ruins!

Par. Cassandra!

Cass. Behold thy Country, Father, rothers, Troy,
All all thy bleeding Victims, see their fall,
And trembling at thy own; their burning Graves
Not half so hot as thy Infernal Fires.

Par. I dare not see that Face; It strikes a blush ——

Cass. If thou canst blush, blush to the Gods, not me.
What tho' the black Adulterer, yet thou art
A Brother still, and I've a Sisters Heart.

Par.

The Siege of T R O Y

Par. O Divine Goodness! now I am lost indeed.
 'Tis through this only Wound my Soul cou'd bleed.

Cass. Farewel, prepare to Die, thou hast not Three Repenting Minutes left 'twixt Death and Thee.

Forsook by all the world, and only mourn'd by me. (Exit.)

Par. Thou Oracle of Fate, to thy great Doom I bow,
 Not overtook by Death, I'll meet him now. (Exit.)

Enter King, Ulysses and Guards.

Kin. Burn out my blazing Vengeance; burn so bright,
 Till the pale Stars of the Immortal Night,
 Shrink in their Heads at thy Diviner Light.

Enter Paris.

Par. Where is the Fate I'd meet?

King. Traytor, 'tis here.

Par. I know that Face too well.

King. And this keen Steel
 Shall know thy Heart as well.

Ulyss. Hold, Sir, disgrace not
 Your Royal Sword with such polluted Blood:
 An Axe, a Scaffold, and a Hangman's hand,
 Best fit so vile a Traytor's Execution.

King. Unkind Ulysses, woulst thou rob my Glory,
 His Death, and by this Arm of Justice given.

No, Paris, meet thy Fate, and from this hand,
 Let publick Scaffolds meaner Heads demand,
 Thought thy Soul's blacker then Perdition, still Thou hast Priam's Royal Blood thy Veins to fill,
 That only Claim does for this Vengeance call.
 Thou'rt born a Prince, and by a King shall fall.
 Thus to thy Heart. (Fights and Wounds Paris.)

Par. O King, thou hast aim'd too well.

King. Vain World, and what's more Vain, fond Love farewell. (Dies.)

Enter

Helen Enters above.

Helen. My Paris dead ! On this sad Object fixt, Eyes look your last, 'tis Helen's Fate comes next.

King. Ha ! Seize the Traitors, bring her to my Vengeance ;
Bring her alive, for Wheels, and Racks, and Tortures ;
Whole Years of Death.

Hel. No, I defy thy Pow'r ;
Here I am safe within this Flaming Tow'r.
I see what Fate does my dear Paris share :
For him I liv'd, for him alone was Fair.
And since my Joys in his cold Urn lie Dead,
These curling Flames shall be my last warm Bed.
Look up then to this shining Bed of Fire ;
And see the Phenix of the world expire. (Leaps down into King. She has bravely scap'd me. the Fire.

Ulyss. Yes, when thus she fell.
She has perform'd, Great Sir, an ill Part well.

King. 'Tis done, 'tis done, this brace of Traitors slain ;
This one Night's Joy rewards my ten Years Pain, (Exeunt.)
(Scene shuts.

Enter Capt. Tom, and Three of the Mob.

Capt. And are we sure we are all alive, Neighbours.

1 Mob. We hope we are.

Capt. Hope ! Alas hopes are all deceitful. For we that are here were all living Men but Yesterday, and who knows but we shall find our selves all knockt o'th' Head to Morrow Morning, as soon as we are awake.

2 Mob. Truly like enough. And yet I hope we are got a little out of harms way ; out of the Walls of that Miserable Town of Slaughter.

3 Mob. Ay, Miserable indeed ; for never was such Fire and Sword-work ever seen. Ah Capt. our poor Neighbour Stitch the Taylor, I saw him drop ?

Capt. And how did he drop ?

3 Mob. Oh strangely, very strangely. Though the good Man was as honest a poor Taylor as any in the Kingdom, yet his Needle could not secure his Head; his Brains were knockt out.

Capt. Alas poor Stitch.

3 Mob. And then there's that honest true Fitcher-man Ralph Horsenail the Farmer; he poor honest Man had his Head cut off.

Capt. Had his Head cut off! And how did the poor Fellow look after his Head was cut off? I warrant ye very sheepishly. Ah, Neighbours, to have ones Head cut off, is enough to put any Man out of Countenance.

3 Mob. Ay. Capt. as you say, the poor Fellow was a little dasht at it; but the honest Lad had the good fortune to catch his Head before it fell, and is bringing it under his Arm, as fast as his weak Legs can bear him, to desire his good Friend, Capt. Bristle, to lend him an Awl and a Cobbler's End to stitch it on again.

Capt. Stitch it on again! Alas I am quite broke; my Eids and my Awls and my whole Stall burnt down. Nay, n y poor Wife's burnt too, I have lost as good a Wife as a Man would desire to part withal.

1 Mob. The poor Cassandra has been a true Prophetess.

2 Mob. Ay, and I might have been a Prophet too, if I had thought on't. I am sure I have seen Signs and Tokens enough to Prognosticate. Sad Times, dismal Times.

Capt. What Signs and Tokens?

2 Mob. Why, 'twas no longer ago than t'other Night, as I was at Supper in the Chimney corner, a whole Family of Swallows that had occupied the Tenement these ten Years fell down Nest and all, into the Porridge-Pot, and quite speyl'd the Broth.

Capt. Oh wondrous! The Fate of Troy to a Tittle. Down fell the Nest of Swallows? Down falls the City of Troy. And where was this fall but in the Chimney, all in Fire and Smoke. Troy, Troy again exactly. Then into what did they fall but the Porridge-Pot? And how many thousand poor Families have all this Night went to Pot, as well as thy poor Nest of Swallows. — Ah Neighbour, hadst thou been an honest Man, and a true Subject, and went and told the King this prodigious Warning-piece, it had been enough to have open'd his Eyes to the Nations danger, and have sav'd the Town, and all our Lives.

The Siege of T R O Y. 23

The Scene opens and discovers a Grove, terminating with a Triumphal Arch, with two Figures of Fame hanging beneath the Arch; and beyond the Arch, over a Tarras Walk, is seen a Beautiful Garden of six side Wings adorn'd with Statues, and ending in a Vista of Garden-work.

The King, Ulysses, and all his Grecians and Guards appearing by him.

Mob. Where are we now?

King. Stop your destroying Hands, your Swords all sheath,
We have had enough of Ruin, Fire and Death.

For you, poor Wretches, you've severely felt
The Arm of Vengeance, for your Princes Guilt;
And do deserve our Pity.

King. Here I have finisht my Revenge. Enjoy
Your Lives and Liberties, go and rebuild your Troy.

Mob. Huzzah.

Capt. of the Mob. Hark ye, Friend, (Speaking to a Grecian) pray tell your King from me, he's a very civil Gentleman, and since he's so humbly Gracious, to bid us build our Town again, strike up Fiddles, we'll give him a Song and a Dance at parting.

An Entertainment of several Dialogues and Dances. After which the King and the rest come forward, and Ulysses speaks.

Ulyss. Ladies, set Helen's Fate before your Eyes;
A Virtuous Bed, and Husband's Love to prize.
One wanton, her Unchast Desires t' enjoy;
Pull'd down her own, and the whole Fate of Troy.

An

An EPILOGUE spoke by the King.

NOW if the Hundreds we have expended; more
Than e'er adorn'd a Southwark Stage before,
Can hope your Gen'rous Favours to obtain,
And all this Cost is not lay'd out in vain;
If you are pleas'd our Morol Play shall take,
Express your Smiles, by the Applause you make.

[Exeunt omnes.]

FINIS.

